THE REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

It is somewhat unusual in politics that within six months after a presidential election the party defeated by an overwhelming majority should call a great convention for the purpose of reorganizing its forces and directing their movements towards the next battle. But the new campaign [illegible] requires more time and attention than the old hortzontal and brass band method, and the Republican leaders are quite right in believing that it is none too soon to organize the forces which are to carry them to victory in 1894.

It is significant that the leaders of the party do not propose any modification of the party's creed, but intend to fight the campaign of 1893 for Congressmen, and of 1892 for President, on the same lines on which they were defeated in 1892. This we believe to be a wise plan. The defeat of last year was due far more to a general feeling of discontent than it was to objections to any particular part of the Republican platform. Democratic promises were so roseate and so reckless that a majority of the voters were in favor of giving that party a chance to see what it could do. At the next election the situation will be quite different. The comparison will not be then between actual facts and gorgeous promises, but between prosperity under a Republican administration and hard times, or greatly diminished prosperity, under Democratic rule. In that campaign Republicans will be confronted not with the theoretical benefits of low tariff, but with its actual injuries, not with the captivating illusions of disordered finances but with the unpleasant consequences of them. A change of Republican policy at the present time and an admission that the party was wrong would be to disclaim responsibility for the prosperity of the country during the Harrison administration, and to lose the advantage which future comparisons will surely give the Republicans.

KAISER WILLIAM'S SPEECH.

The German Emperor has quite a propensity for making what would in a personage less august be called "bad breaks." A number of rash and intemperate speeches have been reported from his lips, and have attracted a good deal of attention, both in Germany and in foreign lands. The latest exhibition of imperial unwisdom was in an address delivered to some army officers at a review of their regiments. What the Emperor said is thus told in the dispatches:

"Since we last met the situation created by the army bill has shown peculiar changes. I could not look forward to the rejection of the bill. On the contrary, trusting to the patriotism of the Reichstag, I hoped for the unconditional acceptance of the bill. The result has caused me deep disappointment, and sorrow. I regret that the patriotic men who were in the minority did not succeed in defeating those who were indifferent to the welfare of their country. During the last few days passionate words, which might have better remained unsaid among gentlemen, have been spoken."

"I was obliged to dissolve the Reichstag, in the hope that the new Reichstag would pass the bill. I am determined, in case the hope also be disappointed, to stake all in my power to obtain the enactment of the measure, for I am too thoroughly convinced of its necessity as a guarantee of the peace of Europe to allow it to be finally defeated.

"We are hearing much about the excitement of the masses just now. I do not think that the German people will allow themselves to be excited by irresponsible meddlers. On the contrary, I know that I am in sympathy with the princes of the federal states, the people and the army. I thank you, gentlemen, for your loyal interests. My desire was to express to you my views concerning the bill. I did when the bill was introduced."

Just what the Emperor meant is more difficult to tell. It has been observed that in his previous utterances a certain allowance had to be made. For instance he said on one occasion, "Whoever opposes me, I will crush into powder." Yet men have opposed him, and are not crushed. So in the present instance although the Emperor spoke with great deliberation and doubtless meant all that he said, too much significance should not be given to his words. Indeed an official declaration is made that the Emperor did not intend to invite a combat with the Reichstag, and purposes a most scrupulous adherence to the constitutional forms. Yet it is evident that opposition of any form to the Emperor signifies only that condition by which he is enabled to enforce his own policy.

It is at least evident that the Emperor intends to use all his power to secure the passage of the proposed Army bill, and such other measures as seem wise to him, and that without regard to the wishes of the people. Whether this is to be accomplished by such political juggling as the one now in progress with the Clericals, whether it will involve a change in the electoral privileges, whether this is to be accomplished by juggling with a plebiscite, or whether as a last resort it involves the exercise of despotic power and, if need be, the trial of civil war it is impossible now to say. But whatever may be his plans if a struggle [illegible] the final result cannot be doubtful. At the close of the Nineteenth century there ought to be in no German popular liberty easier than that which opened in France at the close of the Eighteenth, but it is certain that somehow or other the way will be open.

THE NEW POSTMASTERSHIP.

The task of appointing a successor to Postmaster Fanning as the Post Executive of England was not an easy one, as is shown by the length of time that Mr. Gladstone has allowed the post to remain vacant. Against each one of the persons suggested there seemed to be some good objection, and it was even said that the premier had intended to allow the appointment to remain unfilled. No one apparently had the expectation that Tennyson's successor would be Ruskin.

The surprise at this selection arises chiefly because Mr. Ruskin is not especially a poet. He has indeed written poetry, and his early efforts were highly successful, but his life's work was done in quite a different branch of literature. As an art critic his name will remain in the front rank, and he has gained prominence as a political thinker, whose views were distinguished far more by literary excellence of expression than by applicability to real life. It would not be fair to Mr. Ruskin to say that he is a first class critic, a second class social reformer, and a third class poet, for he would if called upon produce excellent verses, but his various accomplishments as are recorded are in the above order.

It is suggested that in the appointment Mr. Gladstone wished simply to confer public honor upon one of England's most eminent authors, and if this was the purpose in view, no better name than that of Ruskin could have been selected. Such an appointment would undoubtedly [illegible] Some of the laureates in that perhaps a change for the better. Ruskin will honor the position rather than gain from it.

Some fear is expressed as to whether in failing health Mr. Ruskin will be equal to the duties of the position. The duties of the position are not onerous enough to be important. Even a wounded eagle might rise to the necessary height, and if the position should prove altogether a sinecure, the world would not be greatly the worse for it.

Secretary Herbert is of the opinion that a man who has been educated at government expense and is drawing government pay, should not be permitted to devote his time to private affairs. As a general matter such a view is unobjectionable, but an exception should be made where the "private affairs" involve great public benefits. A case in point is that of Lieutenant Peary whose work as an Arctic explorer has been so successful. To such a man for such work the department can well afford to give long leaves of absence with full pay.

Since Grover Cleveland locked the gate and the colored patch Democratic [illegible] the acquaintance of the chief cabinet officers. Probably the fragrant blossoms and juicy green leaves are all the more attractive because they are so safely enclosed behind the "no trespassing" signs. Republicans are just in a position to enjoy the wail of disappointment and indignation that comes from the "professional" politicians whose services have been so poorly rewarded.

Among all the new-fangled theories of political economy, the old law of supply and demand seems to hold its place in spite of all the attempts made to dislodge it. It is gravely announced that one of the reasons for the present depression in the iron industry is that the amount of product manufactured is considerably in excess of the amount used. It reminds one of the man who had seven good reasons for not attending court, one of which was that he was dead.

Mr. Gladstone seems to be making good progress with the Home Rule bill. So far the obstructions that have been put in his path have been met and overcome in a way that speaks well for the future progress of the bill. Votes of closure and for the rejection of amendments go through apparently as a matter of course, and the government still retains its full strength.

Mr. H. A. Ferguson is making an excellent record as postmaster. The force is highly efficient and meets with general approval from the public. His success illustrates the advisability of appointing those who are familiar with the work expected of them. If we are to have a Democrat in this position, probably a better one could not be found.

Mr. Eckels, the new Comptroller of the Currency, is so anxious to prove that he does know something about the duties of his position that he has already announced several changes in the management of the affairs of his office. A little more modest hesitation would better become one of Mr. Eckels's inexperience.

Congressman Bynum is one of the Democratic Congressmen who are eager for an extra session. He wants it called next month. A few weeks after Mr. Bynum has caught his extra session, he and his friends will be asking the Republicans to help them get go of it.

Spain talks of raising her legate in [illegible] and of appointing the Duke of Veragua, lineal descendant of Columbus, to the [illegible] Discovery. Spain could not [illegible] to this country which would be appreciated by Americans.

ABSOLUTELY PURE.

Mr. Blount is not the man whom most Americans would select as the representative of this country in Hawaii. But it is Mr. Cleveland, and not "most Americans," who have the nomination of foreign ministers, and it is certain that Mr. Blount can perform his functions more becomingly, as United States Minister than as any representative."

An invitation is extended by the Grand Army of the Republic to all the organizations of the city to take part in the Decoration day exercises. This invitation should meet with a general response. It is due to the veterans to give them this much show of appreciation, and the holiday is one which all should join in celebrating.

The new Commissioner of Pensions is in no hurry to announce his policy or to rashly begin cutting names from the pension list. This is a becoming spirit. If the lists are to be revised it should be done with care and consideration.

CONFLICTING EXPERTS.

Disagreeing Doctors Create a Condition of Chaos in a Murder Trial.

The conflicting testimony of medical and scientific experts in criminal trials is becoming a very serious question in the minds of many intelligent people. The trial of Prince Chalmers for poisoning his wife is generally interesting, but there seems to be no conception of opinion as to what that change should be.

It is plain that expert testimony is essential to the due administration of justice. This is notably true in instances of charges involving such as the Harris case and that of Dr. Buchanan. Without the evidence of expert physicians, chemists and toxicologists it would be impossible to prove, with any degree of certainty, that the offender had poisoned another by administering one of the most subtle forms of murder.

While expert testimony is a necessity, its abuses and even dangers are matters of common notoriety. Armies of experts who swear positively on one side or the other side [illegible] army, on the other side just as near to the contrary. It is a [illegible] gram expression that a paid expert can always be procured to support any theory or view. Thus dismissing the view from consideration the fact remains that conflict of opinion, whether due to unconscious bias, lack of knowledge or carelessness, is common among experts of the highest professional standing, whose integrity is beyond question.

A most striking illustration of this is afforded by the testimony of the chemical experts in the Buchanan case. Professor Witthaus, a chemist of long standing and large experience, a professor in one of our colleges and the author of a standard work on chemistry testified positively for the prosecution that he found morphine in the body of Mrs. Buchanan. He was corroborated by Professor Doremus, also a chemist of recognized standing. The prosecution relied upon the analysis made by these experts.

Thereupon Professor Vaughn of the University of Michigan, a chemist of national reputation, a specialist in poisons, the author of a standard work on the subject, testified for the defense that it was impossible to determine the presence of morphine from the results of the tests used by Professor Witthaus. He declared that the presence of morphine in a body in which decomposition had set in, as shown cells by Endo and separating morphine crystals, and that in the absence of these the color reactions were not to be taken as proofs.

He went on to explain that ptomaines without morphine, a natural product of matter found in body and due to decay, would give the same color reactions as such matter with morphine. He illustrated this by saying that he had been called upon to analyze the stomach of a man supposed to have been poisoned by morphine, and finding no crystals reported no morphine. This finding, he said, was subsequently corroborated by the discovery that death was caused by a blow on the head.

Professor Vaughn took occasion to comment upon the [illegible] to the accuracy of Witthaus's views by an object lesson showing that the same tests applied to poisons without morphine and to ptomaines with morphine would give the same color reactions. His testimony was corroborated by Dr. Schmidt, a young chemist from the University of Berlin and Bonn, who testified among other things that the tests used by the experts for the prosecution were not to be depended on and were not now accepted by the most advanced German chemists.

It is [illegible] for the lay mind to say whether in this [illegible] for the prosecution or those for the defense are right. It is evident that the side or the other must be wrong. The conflict may even lead to battle among chemists generally. Yet on this evidence largely a jury of 12 intelligent citizens was expected to determine the question of innocence or guilt in a case of life or death.

Moreover, the issue involves not merely the opinion of an expert in an individual case but a chemical process which probably has been and may be used [illegible] In other cases it raises a vitally important question of chemistry as well as criminal jurisprudence and is likely to infuse fresh life into the time honored discussion of expert testimony in criminal trials.—New York Herald.

At the Wrong Shop.

A worthy gentleman, a staid bachelor of mid recently, was the hero of a particularly delightful tale which possibly has not yet got into print. He was sitting in his office in Twenty-third street one day when a very respectable-seeming woman came in and sat down. He turned to her and bowed, when she said she had thus and so the matter with her. He expressed polite regret on [illegible] she went on with a prompt recovery of symptoms and all effects, together with information as to what had been attempted to her relief. He said he was very sorry to learn of her ailment and wished that he could do anything to alleviate it.

"But can't you?" she asked, with visible astonishment.

"I think not," he said. "Why don't you see a physician?"

She started to her feet. "Why, isn't this the dispensary?"

"No, madam. The dispensary is on the other corner. This is the National Academy of Design."—Harper's Weekly.

The Religious Faith of the Presidents.

Everybody in New York has heard of the remark recently made by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll to the effect that Abraham Lincoln was no more a Christian than Voltaire was. [illegible] discussion of the religious views of the martyr president which promises to last a long time.

It is a remarkable fact that of the 23 presidents of the United States very little is recorded by the biographers of the majority of them as to their religious faith. It is further remarkable that as to all of the greatest of them, Washington excepted, there was much doubt during their lives and much discussion after their deaths as to whether they were Christians at all, and if they were, to what classification of Christians they properly belonged. By common consent the [illegible] Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant. A Practical Comment.

Yellowstone park, Rocky Mountain region of the springs, about 60 feet in diameter, and is fortunate hot water and steam. New York Stock Market.

New York, May 10.—Money on call has been steady, ranging from 5 to 7 per cent, last loan at 6, and closing offered at 6.

Government bonds have been heavy, and railroad bonds weak.

The stock market worked toward a decidedly lower range of prices again today. The early weakness occurred at intervals were of short duration, and as the day drew to a close the room became bolder, and attacked both high and low priced shares with great vigor. In addition to the talk about a most unfavorable crop report, the street was flooded with rumors concerning the embarrassment of prominent operators here and in Philadelphia and of the probable appointment of receivers for the Northern Pacific and Erie. None of these rumors were denied, but they were made to do service nevertheless. There was also existing rumors about the affairs of the General Electric company, which were emphatically denied by the president, who states in an open communication that the affairs of the company are in a prosperous condition.

The county commissioners are arranging to plant some trees at the county jail.

Mr. L. N. McLain of Pueblo was in the city yesterday on his way to Chicago and the East.

Pike's Peak Commandery No. 6, K. T. will meet this evening for work in the Red Cross degree.

F. E. Robinson received about eleven hundred pounds of Whitman's candy last evening. It is for the spring trade.

Mr. Edwin Dyer, of the High school, took his class in geology to Cheyenne yesterday for some field work in the petrified forest.

The district court has three murder trials for this term. The first to be tried is Dr. Judkins and is set for next Thursday.

The City Treasurer states that the time for licensing dogs expired yesterday and that the work of extermination of valueless canines will soon go on.

Deputy Sheriff P. A. Mangold left for Canon City last evening with Hal Walters, the colored boy who was sentenced to serve a term in the penitentiary yesterday.

Since the change in the time card of the Rock Island road the morning mail from the east is nearly an hour later in reaching the postoffice. Patrons of the office should remember this.

The county court yesterday heard a suit from Manitou entitled, Town of Manitou vs. John McCord, for violation of the liquor ordinance. It is an appeal case, but was not decided.

Dr. Montague's lecture on Mexico at the High school auditorium to-morrow evening is entirely new and should not be mistaken for others on the same subject that he has delivered.

Sir William Brooks, Baronet, of Scotland, accompanied by Lady Brooks, arrived at The Antlers last evening. Sir William Brooks was formerly a prominent member of parliament.

The County Commissioners are ready to hear the statements of voters whose names have been published as not voting at the last election. It is easier to have your name re-registered now than it will be later.

The Colorado Springs Musical club will give its last concert for the season at the college chapel next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It will be a piano recital by Mr. Pearson, assisted by Mrs. Cunneau, vocalist. Tickets 75 cents on sale at the door.

The matinee of the Liszt-Bendel School of Music to be given at Weber hall this evening begins at 4 p. m. instead of 2 p. m. as announced in Sunday morning's Gazette. Tickets of admission: Children 25 cents, adults 50 cents. Same price for evening.

The Choral Union of Colorado College will give a musical at the Unitarian [illegible] Tuesday evening, May [illegible]. The program will consist of piano and vocal solos, part songs and [illegible]. Cantata, "The Feast of Adonis." No admission will be charged and all friends are cordially invited.

The matinee of the children's classes of the Liszt-Bendel School of Music will be particularly attractive inasmuch as it will show the vast difference between physical culture of the gymnasium and the repose of aesthetic culture as taught by Delsarte and his followers. Weber hall, May 11, 11 a. m.

The members of the grand jury closed up their business yesterday with a little sport at Uncle Aaron Bailey's expense. Since Uncle gave up the janitorship of the court house he has occasionally been employed by his successor as an assistant. The other day he got angry at Jim and indulged in a hit of "cussing" match. The jurymen decided to investigate the matter and Uncle was called up. The district attorney prosecuted and Uncle Bailey defended himself. It was a close call but his name saved him. He was excused as "bailee" with the promise not to do it again.

A new stone culvert is being built across Pike's Peak avenue from the First National to the Exchange Bank. When the matter was brought before the council several weeks since, Alderman Finegan, who had previously put in a bid for the work, asked for the opinion of the city attorney as to whether or not he could take the contract. The city attorney construed the ordinance that a city official could not take a contract from the city, and the alderman promptly withdrew his bid, although it was the lowest. D. A. Russell has the job.

The Minstrels.

George H. Primrose and William H. West still retain the great title of the Merry Monarchs of Burnt-cork Minstrelsy, and their reputation is world-wide. Their appearance in this city next Saturday afternoon and evening at the Opera House will be welcomed by the theatre-going people, and they will undoubtedly be received by an enthusiastic audience at each and every performance. The program is made up of new and interesting novelties, and the music and jokes are of the latest pattern. The performance, from the first part to the finish, is the best ever seen on the minstrel stage, and will attract a great deal of attention the coming season. Mr. George H. Primrose has given his time during the entire summer to the designing of the first part, which, by the way, [illegible] interested more money in scenery and costumes than in any other two seasons. The company is made up of artists in their various parts, and a first class performance of minstrelsy will be given.

Cripple Creek Gold Fields.

This camp has been wonderfully developed during the past year or two; there are at least fifty mines that have been and are shipping pay ores to the stamp mills and smelters and hundreds of good prospects that are pushing development work daily, so that by the time the railroads are completed into this camp many of them will doubtless be shipping properties of pay ore.

THE LABEE FRENCH STAMP MILL is now completed, with all the known modern improvements for treating low grade ores successfully, and will begin operations May 1st, treating a hundred tons of ore per day.

The future of this camp is assured. We believe this is a good time to make profitable investments in many of the Gold Mining Stocks of this camp, and will take pleasure in furnishing the best information we have regarding the different properties. Call on or address

NOT EASY

For the ladies to find stylish, well-fitting shoes for $3.00. Usually you pay more money for shoes, because you are not able to find style and fit in the lower grade. We have undoubtedly the largest assortment of ladies' fine shoes for $3 in the City of Denver. Our $3 shoe has the fit, the style and the wear of higher priced shoes. We can fit the narrow or the wide foot. We carry them in all styles, toes, patent tip or plain cloth top or kid top, lace or button, thin sole or thick sole.

STATE OF COLORADO, }
COUNTY OF EL PASO. }

We, the undersigned, County Clerk and Justices of the Peace in and for aforesaid county and State, in accordance with an act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for establishing and maintaining at public expense, permanent registration lists of all qualified electors, etc., etc.," do hereby certify that we have compared the registry lists with the poll books for the election held in the city of Colorado Springs, Colorado, on April 4, 1893, and that the foregoing list of persons did not vote at said election. We further certify that the respective places of residence are correctly given in said list as appears from the permanent registration books on file in the County Clerk's office.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals this 3rd day of May, 1893.

[SEAL] F. W. HOUGHERT,
County Clerk.

SUITS AGAINST A CITY

PEOPLE WHO GO TO LAW FOR DAMAGES RECEIVED FROM FALLS.

The City of New York Defends Hundreds of These Personal Claims Every Year, Few of Them Are Successful, and Then Only For Small Sums.

The city appears in the courts at least twice a week [illegible] suits brought by its citizens. Time was when the city paid out in such damages many thousands annually. The corporation counsel systematized the work of the office a few years ago and placed such damage suits in the care of a single assistant. Since that time the special knowledge in the corporation counsel's office has been considerable and increasing, so that the office has a infinite acquaintance with the methods of those lawyers that bring damage suits against the city.

One result of specializing the work of the corporation counsel's office has been a marked decrease in the amount paid in judgments against the city as the outcome of suits for damages. The whole amount of damages paid by the city in the past four years has been less than $3,000. There have been ninety hundred suits brought in that time, and the aggregate of damages claimed has reached $2,000,000. Only a small percentage of these suits are successful and to few of them do the plaintiffs recover the amount claimed. The city fights nearly every case that is brought and seldom compromises a suit unless the justice of the plaintiff's case is of the plainest character.

There are many lawyers who make it their business to seek out persons who meet with accidents and urge them to bring suits for damages. They look out in the corporation counsel's office that there has not yet developed a class of lawyers who make a specialty of such suits against the city, though such specialization is a tendency of the present time. When an accident of such importance to get into the newspapers occurs the victim of it has almost immediately communications somewhat in this fashion:

"We have learned of the painful and serious accident that befell you [illegible] day, and we write to assure you that we are ready to do all in our power to aid you in recovering damages from the responsible parties for the wrong you have unfortunately suffered."

The signature is that of a lawyer or a firm of lawyers making a specialty of accident cases. Surprisingly respectable names are attached to such letters, and in many instances the victim of the accident seeks the advice of some one of the lawyers that send such communications. By way of making all things sure some lawyers have in their pay nurses and other attendants in hospitals to which persons suffering from the results of accidents are usually taken.

In a recent case 20 witnesses of an accident lawyers applied to see a patient at a hospital on the day following his mishap. Many hundreds of such suits are brought against the city every year, and perhaps half of those in fit state become to trial. The city seldom loses on first trial, and when it does usually appeals the case. The office of the corporation counsel is extremely skeptical as to the justice of such claims, and there is a strong suspicion that litigation of the kind is incited by lawyers who hope to profit by it, and that many cases are brought with full knowledge on the part of claimant and counsel that the claim is groundless. The counsel in many instances discontinued the cases when claimants are unable or unwilling to advance money to meet preliminary expenses. Nearly all such cases are undertaken upon contingent fees, and the share of the lawyer is commonly half of the amount recovered.

Many cases arise every winter from injuries received by persons who fall upon icy pavements. The Brooklyn bridge was long the fruitful source of damage suits against the two cities, until the legislature passed last year a law making the bridge trustees responsible for such damages. The most conspicuous case of late years was that of Margaret Melville, who asked $50,000 damages for injuries received on the bridge. She received a verdict for the sum amount, but on appeal the verdict was reversed. One Page received a verdict of $12,000 for injuries in an accident to a bridge train. This was cut down to $10,000 on appeal, and the city finally paid him something less.

A common ground of action in accidents caused by inequality in the paving or pavements. The streets of New York makes such inequalities inevitable, and the city solicitor's office confidently expects a considerable number of such suits every year. Many other cases grow out of broken pavements and cross walks. In a like manner suits for suits to be instituted by persons who step upon banana peels and the like. The effort of the counsel in such cases is to prove that the pavement at the scene of the accident was defective. The corporation counsel's office, however, usually manages to find some one who was present at the scene of the accident and is able to show that there was no defect in the pavement. The police keep a watch up on such accidents as are likely to result in damage suits, and as soon as suit is begun the office sends out an agent to look up the facts in the case and especially to examine the scene of the accident. The assistant who is to represent the corporation counsel at the trial usually visits the scene of the accident and makes himself thoroughly acquainted with the conditions then prevailing.—New York Sun.

THE INTRODUCTION OF MENTHOL.

It Was Utterly Unknown in England Twenty-five Years Ago.

The medicinal use of menthol in China and Japan goes back into the dateless ages. Isolated references to its application in the east are met with here and there in the records of western travelers in those parts, but we shall probably never know the name of the discoverer or the early history of its introduction.

We do not know with absolute certainty when and by what incidents crystals were first brought to the notice of European pharmacologists. It is said that they were heard of pharmaceutically on the continent as long ago as the end of the last century, but if that statement is capable of proof the drug must have fallen into oblivion shortly after its introduction, for it was certainly utterly unknown even by report to most persons in the drug trade 25 years ago. Somewhere about 1861 a consignment of the drug was received in London under the name of Chinese peppermint oil and passingly commented upon for its curious property of solidifying with a fall in the temperature.

To the late John Mackay of Edinburgh belongs the distinction of first having called the attention of British pharmacists to the valuable properties of menthol. About 1866 he brought "po-ho oil" with him from Paris, where it was then sold in the small, red labeled Chinese bottles familiar to eastern travelers as a kind of proprietary article.

Had menthol been an utterly valueless medicine it would perhaps have taken Europe by storm then and reigned [illegible]
